Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 2
A Java EE application server has four different security realms for user management. One of the security realms is custom made. This realm supports only individual user entries, no grouping of users, and is used by the application. Which two statements are true? (Choose two.)
A. All security roles need a role-link entry in the deployment descriptor.
B. EJB developers cannot use the isCallerInRole method.
C. The annotation @RunAs("AAA") can still be used for this application.
D. All security roles can be mapped successfully to individual users in the realm.
Answer: C,D Explanation:
Not A, not C: A security role reference defines a mapping between the name of a role that is called from a web component using isUserInRole(String role) and the name of a security role that has been defined for the application. If no security-role-ref element is declared in a deployment descriptor and the isUserInRole method is called, the container defaults to checking the provided role name against the list of all security roles defined for the web application. Using the default method instead of using the security-role-ref element limits your flexibility to change role names in an application without also recompiling the servlet making the call.
For example, to map the security role reference cust to the security role with role name bankCustomer, the syntax would be:
<servlet>
<security-role-ref>
<role-name>cust</role-name>
<role-link>bankCustomer</role-link>
</security-role-ref>
</servlet>
Note:
*A realm is a security policy domain defined for a web or application server. A realm contains a collection of users, who may or may not be assigned to a group.
*The protected resources on a server can be partitioned into a set of protection spaces, each with its own authentication scheme and/or authorization database containing a collection of users and groups. A realm is a complete database of users and groups identified as valid users of one or more applications and controlled by the same authentication policy.

*In some applications, authorized users are assigned to roles. In this situation, the role assigned to the user in the application must be mapped to a principal or group defined on the application server.
*A role is an abstract name for the permission to access a particular set of resources in an application. A role can be compared to a key that can open a lock. Many people might have a copy of the key. The lock doesn't care who you are, only that you have the right key.
