NEW QUESTION: 3

API Management allows you to secure access to the back-end service of an API using client certificates. This is done by using a certificate authority (CA) to issue certificates to clients. The CA is a trusted third party that issues certificates to clients. The CA is responsible for verifying the identity of the client and issuing a certificate to the client. The client then uses the certificate to authenticate to the API. This process is called mutual authentication. In this scenario, the CA is responsible for verifying the identity of the client and issuing a certificate to the client. The client then uses the certificate to authenticate to the API. This process is called mutual authentication.

Answer:
