C. Unlock additional advertising tools within Facebook.
D. Build Core Audiences based on website visitors.
E. Track cross-device conversions.
F. Build audiences based on users who have installed your app.
Answer: A,B,C,E
Explanation:
Explanation
You can create a pixel, and connect it to your website, to:
* Make sure your ads are shown to the right people, on the right devices, at the right moment:
Knowing how people use your website can imply what they're likely to do next. This helps Facebook deliver ads to the people most likely to take the action you want them to take.
* Build effective advertising audiences: With Custom Audiences, you can show your ads to people based on how they've already interacted with your website. Using Lookalike Audiences, you can target ads to brand-new people based on their similarity to established visitors and customers.

* Measure cross-device conversions: See how customers move between devices while engaging with your content - and determine what devices they are most likely to convert on.
* Unlock additional Facebook advertising tools: Web conversion campaigns, Custom Audiences from your website, dynamic ad delivery, and metrics such as cost per lead or cost per conversion are only available to advertisers who've installed pixel on their websites.
* Better evaluate your return on ad spend by more precisely attributing online behaviors to your Facebook, Instagram, Messenger, and Audience Network ads.
Pixel can enable powerful, actionable, and cost-saving adjustments to ad delivery - such as only displaying brand awareness campaigns to people who've never visited your website, or offering limited-time discount codes to people who've abandoned online shopping carts.
